Where do we go from here?

A photograph of a church interior, viewed from the back of the sanctuary looking towards the front. The foreground is filled with rows of empty, light-colored upholstered chairs. In the background, there is a raised platform with a wooden pulpit on the right and a wooden altar on the left. The walls are light-colored with decorative elements, including a large circular mural in the center and two vertical murals on the sides. The overall lighting is warm and soft.
